The GMAT® Information Bulletin provides important information and outlines the binding terms and conditions for individuals planning to take the Graduate Management Admission Test® (GMAT®). The terms and conditions described in this Bulletin apply to all aspects of the GMAT® Program and are effective for calendar year 2006. Please note that GMAT® terms and conditions, including, without limitation, all fees, rules, policies, and procedures, are subject to change without notice. See the Graduate Management Admission Council® (GMAC®) Web site, www.mba.com, for the most up-to-date information. The GMAT® test is sponsored, owned, and directed by GMAC®, a global organization composed of graduate business schools located in the United States and around the world. Two independent testing organizations assist GMAC® in the delivery of the GMAT® Program. Pearson VUE, a business of NCS Pearson, Inc., administers the GMAT® test and consults with GMAC® about general test administration policy. ACT, Inc. develops test material, provides certain scoring services, and conducts research relating to the test.

Review
11th Edition

The new 11th edition now includes a diagnostic test to help you assess where you need to focus your test-preparation efforts. And, if you need additional resources, there are two more all new test-preparation guides:

- The Official Guide for GMAT® Quantitative Review
- The Official Guide for GMAT® Verbal Review

The questions in all three books are ordered by difficulty to help you save study time. There are also new detailed answer explanations to help you more fully prepare for the GMAT® test. These are the only books on the market with real GMAT® questions and answers by the creators of the GMAT® exam.

The GMAT® Exam

About the GMAT® Exam

The Graduate Management Admission Test® (GMAT®) is a computer-based examination that is administered year-round at test centers throughout the world. The GMAT® exam measures basic verbal, mathematical, and analytical writing skills developed over a long period of time. It is specifically designed to help graduate management programs assess the qualifications of applicants for advanced study in business and management. GMAT® scores are used by more than 3,000 graduate management programs from more than 1,500 graduate management schools, many of which require GMAT® scores from each applicant.

Your GMAT® scores are only one predictor of academic performance in the first year of graduate management school. To find out how your GMAT® scores will be used in the application review process, you should contact the admissions office at each school to which you are applying. The GMAT® test does not presuppose any specific knowledge of business or other specific content areas, nor does it measure achievement in any particular subject areas. The test does not measure subjective factors important to academic and career success—such as motivation, creativity, interpersonal skills, study skills, or overall success on the job. Test takers should note that the GMAT® test is conducted entirely in English, all instructions are provided in English, and all responses must be entered using standard American English characters.

What Is a Computer-Adaptive Test?

The GMAT® exam is a computer-adaptive test (CAT), which means that questions are selected as you take the exam. At the start of each multiple-choice section of the GMAT CAT® exam, you are presented a question of middle difficulty. As you answer each question, the computer scores your answer and uses it—as well as your responses to any preceding questions and information about the test design—to determine which question to present next. As long as you respond correctly to each question, questions of increased difficulty typically will be presented. When you enter incorrect responses, the computer will generally present you with questions of lesser difficulty. Your next question will reflect both your previous performance and the requirements of the test design, which means that different test takers will be given different questions. Question selection is based on your responses to previous questions, and the GMAT CAT® adjusts to your individual ability level. As a result, you will get few questions that are either too easy or too difficult for you.

Because the computer scores each question before selecting the next one, you must answer each question when it is presented. Once you answer a question and move on to another, you cannot go back and change your answer because the computer has already incorporated your answer and the test design requirements into its selection of your next question.

Each computer-based test section meets established specifications, including the types of questions asked and the subject matter presented. The statistical characteristics of the questions answered correctly and incorrectly, including their difficulty levels, are taken into account in the calculation of scores. Therefore, scores of all test takers can be compared even though they received different questions.

Guidelines for the Use of GMAT® Scores

What Computer Skills Do I Need?

Minimal computer skills are required to complete the GMAT® test. On www.mba.com, you can download the free GMATPrep™ test-preparation software with a tutorial designed to familiarize you with taking the GMAT® test. Before you go to the test center, GMAC® recommends that you review the testing tools covered in the tutorials. You will also be able to access the Help function at any time during the actual test administration, but any time spent reviewing the Help screens will count against the allotted time for the test section you are working on.

What Can I Expect at the Test Center?

The GMAT® test is administered in individual computer workstations. You will have the opportunity to take two timed breaks, one after completing the essays and another between the Quantitative and Verbal sections. If you exceed the time allowed for the optional breaks during the GMAT® exam, the extra time will be deducted from the time allotted for completing the next section of exam material (the Quantitative or Verbal section).

For specific information about identification requirements and test center procedures and rules, see page 7. For information about preparing for the test, including test-taking suggestions, see page 8 or visit www.mba.com.

The GMAT® Format

The GMAT® exam includes Analytical Writing Assessment, Quantitative, and Verbal sections. Data Sufficiency and Problem Solving questions are intermingled throughout the Quantitative section, and Sentence Correction, Reading Comprehension, and Critical Reasoning questions are intermingled throughout the Verbal section. The Verbal and Quantitative sections contain computer-adaptive multiple-choice questions. For the Analytical Writing Assessment, you will be presented with two essay topics and will type your responses using the computer keyboard. The following chart provides timing information for each section of the test.

	Questions	Timing
Analytical Writing Assessment
Analysis of an Issue	1 topic	30 minutes
Analysis of an Argument	1 topic	30 minutes
Optional Rest Break*
Quantitative (Problem Solving and Data Sufficiency)
	37 questions	75 minutes
Optional Rest Break*
Verbal (Reading Comprehension, Critical Reasoning, and Sentence Correction)
	41 questions	75 minutes
Total Time (with breaks)		4 hours (approx.)

* For timing of Optional Rest Break, please visit www.mba.com.

Individual test questions are reviewed on a routine basis to attempt to eliminate language, symbols, or content considered to be potentially offensive or inappropriate for major subgroups of the test-taking population or that serve to perpetuate any negative attitude about these subgroups. In addition, statistical procedures are applied to help identify questions that may provide an unfair advantage to members of any particular group.

Analytical Writing Assessment

The Analytical Writing Assessment (AWA) portion of the GMAT® test consists of two 30-minute writing tasks—Analysis of an Issue and Analysis of an Argument. For Analysis of an Issue, you will need to analyze a given issue or opinion and then explain your point of view on the subject by citing relevant reasons and/or examples drawn from your experience, observations, or reading. For Analysis of an Argument, you will need to analyze the reasoning behind a given argument and then write a critique of that argument.

The AWA is designed as a direct measure of your ability to think critically and to communicate your ideas. More specifically, the Analysis of an Issue task tests your ability to explore the complexities of an issue or opinion and, if appropriate, to take a position informed by your understanding of those complexities. The Analysis of an Argument task tests your ability to formulate an appropriate and constructive critique of a specific conclusion based upon a specific line of thinking.

Your essay scores are based on the overall quality of your ideas about the issue and argument presented; your overall ability to organize, develop, and express those ideas; the relevant supporting reasons and examples you use; and your ability to control the elements of standard written English. (Only standard American English characters may be used when entering your essay responses.) The issue and argument topics that you will find on the test concern subject matter of general interest, some related to business and some to a variety of other subjects. It is important to note, however, that none presupposes any specific knowledge of business or of other specific content areas—only your capacity to write analytically is being assessed.

You may download a list of more than 300 possible AWA topics for both Analysis of an Argument and Analysis of an Issue from www.mba.com. These topics are also available in The Official Guide for GMAT® Review. Topics from this list may (but will not necessarily) appear in your actual GMAT® exam during 2006.

Quantitative Section

The Quantitative section of the test measures basic mathematical skills and understanding of elementary concepts, and the ability to reason quantitatively, solve quantitative problems, and interpret graphic data. Two types of multiple-choice questions are used in the Quantitative section—Problem Solving and Data Sufficiency. Both types of questions are intermingled throughout the section and require knowledge of arithmetic, elementary algebra, and commonly known concepts of geometry.

Problem Solving questions are designed to test basic mathematical skills, understanding of elementary mathematical concepts, and the ability to reason quantitatively and to solve quantitative problems.

Each Data Sufficiency question consists of a question and two statements, labeled (1) and (2), which contain additional information. You must decide whether the data given in the statements are sufficient for answering the question. Data Sufficiency questions are designed to measure your ability to analyze a quantitative problem, to recognize which information is relevant, and to determine at what point there is sufficient information to solve the problem.

For examples of each quantitative question type and directions for answering them, visit www.mba.com to download the GMATPrep™ software.

Verbal Section

The Verbal section of the test measures your ability to read and comprehend written material, to reason and evaluate arguments, and to correct written material to conform to standard written English. Three types of multiple-choice questions are used in the Verbal section of the GMAT® exam—Reading Comprehension, Critical Reasoning, and Sentence Correction.

Reading Comprehension passages are accompanied by interpretive, applied, and inferential questions. The passages are up to 350 words long, and they discuss topics from the social sciences, the physical or biological sciences, and such business-related fields as marketing, economics, and human resource management. Reading Comprehension questions measure your ability to understand, analyze, and apply information and concepts presented in written form. All questions are to be answered on the basis of what is stated or implied in the reading material; no specific knowledge of the material is required.

Critical Reasoning questions are designed to test the reasoning skills involved in (1) making arguments, (2) evaluating arguments, and (3) formulating or evaluating a plan of action. The materials on which questions are based are drawn from a variety of sources. No familiarity with the subject matter of those materials is presupposed.

Sentence Correction questions ask you which of the five choices best expresses an idea or relationship. The questions will require you to be familiar with the stylistic conventions and grammatical rules of standard written English and to demonstrate your ability to improve incorrect or ineffective expressions.

For examples of each verbal question type and directions for answering them, visit www.mba.com to download the GMATPrep™ software.

Scheduling Your Appointment

Admission deadlines for graduate schools vary. Check with the schools to which you are applying and make your test appointment early enough to allow your scores to be reported before the schools' application deadlines. In the United States, it may be possible to schedule your test appointment a few days before you take the test, but popular dates (especially weekends) fill up quickly. Please note that you may not schedule an appointment more than six (6) months in advance.

When scheduling your test appointment, be sure that the spelling of your name matches the name printed on the identification you will present at the test center. If this information does not match, you will NOT be admitted and your entire test fee will be forfeited. For more information about what forms of identification will be accepted, please see page 7.

If a technical error occurs when you schedule a GMAT® appointment, Pearson VUE will make every effort to correct the error. If the error cannot be corrected, your only recourse is to reschedule your appointment at no additional cost or receive a refund.

Registering for the GMAT® Test

To register, you must first select a test center location. Test centers operate on their own schedules and can accommodate varying numbers of test takers throughout the day. To choose the most convenient location for your test sitting, refer to the Test Center List in Appendix B. Once you have selected a test location, you will need to schedule a GMAT® test appointment online, by phone, by fax, or by mail. Available time slots change continuously as people register for the test. You will select from available testing times at your chosen test center when you register.

Online: You may schedule your test appointment online at www.mba.com. If you have not already signed up as an mba.com user, you will be required to do so before you schedule your test appointment. Be sure to enter your name exactly as it appears on the identification you will present at the test center. Fee payments for test appointments made online can only be made by credit card (see “Test Fees” below).

Phone: To schedule your test appointment by phone, contact GMAT® Customer Service in your region following the instructions on page 21. Fee payments for test appointments made by phone can only be made by credit card (see “Test Fees” below).

Mail or Fax: To schedule your appointment by mail or fax, complete the GMAT® Appointment-Scheduling Form located on page 29 in this Bulletin and mail or fax it using the GMAT® Customer Service information provided on page 21. Be sure to include appropriate payment (see “Test Fees” below). Requests received without payment will be returned unprocessed.

Your appointment will be confirmed via e-mail if you provide an e-mail address when you register. E-mail confirmation notices are sent soon after Pearson VUE schedules your appointment. If you do not provide an e-mail address, you will receive confirmation in a mailed letter; depending on where you live, this letter may take several weeks to arrive. If you schedule your appointment within three (3) calendar days of the test administration and do not provide an e-mail address, you will not receive a confirmation letter.

Test Fees

Visit the Web site www.mba.com to obtain current information about test and service fees. You may also contact GMAT® Customer Service in your region using one of the methods noted on page 21.

PREFERRED FORMS OF PAYMENT

- Credit card* (Visa®, MasterCard®, American Express®, or JCB®)
- Debit card (Visa® or MasterCard® only)
- Cashier's check (mailed forms only)
- Money order (mailed forms only)
- Personal check (mailed forms only)

OTHER PAYMENT POLICIES

Payments made by check must be payable in U.S. dollars and drawn on banks located in the United States.

All payments must be made in full, include the correct numeric and written fee amount, have the appropriate signature(s), and be made payable to Pearson VUE-GMAT®. Postdated checks will not be accepted. The bank name and its location should be preprinted on the face of the check. Taxes must be included where applicable, and the appointment date must be at least 10 calendar days after the check is received to allow time for the check to clear. (Refer to www.mba.com for current tax information.) Please keep in mind that it can take up to eight (8) weeks for letters to reach the U.S. from some countries.

By sending a personal check, you are authorizing Pearson VUE, at its discretion, to use the information on your check to make a one-time electronic debit from your account for the amount of your check; no additional amount will be added. An additional service fee will be debited electronically from your account if your check is returned. For the most up-to-date information about this fee, please refer to www.mba.com.

If payment is not submitted in U.S. dollars, or otherwise does not comply with the above requirements or other standard banking practices, your registration or request for service will not be processed and your payment will be rejected and/or returned. Any questions regarding billing or refunding should be directed to GMAT® Customer Service using the contact information on page 21.

*If your credit card is declined, your appointment will automatically be canceled. Upon notification of the cancellation, you will be responsible for scheduling your test appointment again using a valid form of payment.

Test Takers Under Age 18

You must be at least 13 years old to register for and take the GMAT® exam. If you are between the ages of 13 and 18, before taking the test, you are required to send a written form signed by your parent or legal guardian to GMAT® Customer Service in your region. This form authorizes you to take the GMAT® exam and states that you and your parent or legal guardian agree to adhere to all terms and conditions contained in this Bulletin, including, but not limited to, those related to testing; score cancellations; privacy policies; and the collection, processing, use, and transmission to the United States of your personally identifiable data (including the digital photograph, fingerprint, signature, and audio/video recording collected at the test center), and disclosure of such data to GMAC®, its service providers, any score recipients you select, and others as necessary to prevent unlawful activity or as required by law. Please contact GMAT® Customer Service to obtain a copy of the authorization form. The form must be received by Pearson VUE at least three (3) days before your scheduled appointment or the appointment will be canceled.

Test Takers with Disabilities

GMAC® and Pearson VUE are committed to providing access to the GMAT® test by offering reasonable accommodations to test takers with disabilities in accordance with applicable law. Testing accommodations are available for test takers who meet certain eligibility criteria and properly document their request. To register as a test taker with a disability, you need to obtain a copy of the Supplement for Test Takers with Disabilities. You can order a copy by using the information below, or you can download it from www.mba.com.

Rescheduling or Canceling Your Appointment

If you decide to reschedule your test appointment, you can do so online or by phone (follow the instructions in "Scheduling Your Appointment" on page 5). To avoid having to pay the full test fee again, you must visit www.mba.com or call GMAT® Customer Service to reschedule at least seven (7) calendar days before the original appointment date and time. You will be charged a service fee for each appointment you choose to reschedule. If you choose to reschedule less than seven (7) calendar days before your appointment, the original fee will not be refunded and you will be charged the full test fee for the new appointment. Appointments must be rescheduled within six (6) months of the date you are rescheduling your appointment. Visit www.mba.com to obtain current rescheduling fee information. Fees are subject to change without notice.

If you decide to cancel your test appointment, you can do so online or by phone (follow the instructions in "Scheduling Your Appointment" on page 5). You must visit www.mba.com or call GMAT® Customer Service to cancel at least seven (7) calendar days before the date and time of your scheduled appointment or your entire test fee will be forfeited. You will receive a partial refund of your test fee if your cancellation request is received at least seven (7) calendar days prior to your scheduled appointment. Visit www.mba.com to obtain current cancellation refund information. Refunds are made in U.S. dollars. If you paid by credit card, that card will be credited; if you paid by check or money order, you will receive a refund check. Refund amounts are subject to change without notice.

Test Day

You should report to the test center at least 30 minutes before your scheduled appointment to allow time for checking in. If you arrive more than 15 minutes after your scheduled appointment time, you may not be admitted and your entire test fee will be forfeited.

Test centers do not have large waiting areas. If friends or relatives accompany you to the test center, they will not be permitted to wait in the center or contact you while you are taking the test. After you check in and before you enter the testing room, you will be asked to deposit personal items in a locker. Storage space is small, so please plan accordingly. Neither GMAC® nor the test centers assume any responsibility for your personal belongings. GMAC® recommends that you dress so that you can adapt to variations in room temperature.

On occasion, weather conditions or other circumstances beyond the control of the test center or Pearson VUE may require a delayed start or the rescheduling of your test appointment. If technical problems caused by the test center or Pearson VUE necessitate canceling your test session or prevent reporting of your scores, you will be offered the opportunity to schedule another test appointment free of charge or receive a full refund of the original test fee. These remedies are the exclusive remedies available to examinees affected by technical problems. Please see “Examinee Remedies” on page 24 for additional information.

When you arrive at the test center:

- You must have acceptable, valid identification as described in “Identification Requirements.”
- You should have the appointment confirmation letter you received from Pearson VUE. However, if you do not have your confirmation letter—or were not issued a confirmation letter—you will still be allowed to test if you have a scheduled appointment.
- You need to know the names of the GMAT® Programs to which you want your GMAT® exam scores sent. (See “Selecting Your Score-Report Recipients” on page 8.)

Identification Requirements

You MUST present acceptable and valid identification (ID), as described below, to be admitted to the test center. ID requirements are strictly enforced. It is your responsibility to read and understand the instructions and requirements. If you do not present appropriate ID, you will not be admitted to the test center and will forfeit your entire test fee.

Admittance to the test center does not imply that the identification you presented was valid. If it is determined that your ID was fraudulent or otherwise invalid, your test scores will be canceled and your entire test fee will be forfeited. Notification of the cancellation will also be sent to any institutions that received your scores and may include the reason for the cancellation.

Note: If you have questions about the following ID requirements, please contact Pearson VUE BEFORE you schedule your test appointment. (Refer to the GMAT® Customer Service contact information on page 21.)

You must present at least one of the forms of government-issued identification listed below when you arrive at the test center. The ID must be current (not expired) and legible and must bear your name in the Roman alphabet (as is used in this Bulletin) exactly as you provided when you made your test appointment. It must also include a recent, recognizable photograph and your signature and date of birth. If you cannot provide one form of ID that includes all four (4) of these, you will be required to present a second ID also from the list that includes the missing element(s). With some restrictions, as noted in the following paragraph, the following are the only acceptable forms of ID that you may use at the test center:

Acceptable Forms of ID

- Passport*
- Government-issued driver’s license
- Government-issued national/state/province identity card (including European ID card)
- Military ID card

*If you are testing in Bangladesh, China, Pakistan, or India, you must present your passport as your identification. If you are testing outside your country of citizenship, you must present your passport as identification (unless you are a citizen of a European Union or Schengen Zone country testing in another of those countries, in which case you may present your passport, national identification card, or European identity card).

If you are a citizen of a country against which trade, export, boycott, or other sanctions have been imposed by the U.S. government, you must be able to prove permanent residence in a country not subject to any such sanctions prior to testing. If you cannot do so, you must provide evidence that you intend to use the benefit of testing outside of your country of citizenship. Pearson VUE and/or GMAC® will evaluate such evidence and determine whether you may take the GMAT® exam pursuant to their understanding of statutory obligations and prohibitions.

Note: No other forms of identification will be accepted at the test center. Unacceptable forms of ID include expired passports or driver’s licenses, social security cards, draft classification cards, credit cards, employee or student IDs, letters from your university or college, IDs with physical descriptions in place of photos, or any other kind of ID that does not meet the requirements described above.

Test Preparation for the GMAT®

GMAC® believes that all GMAT® test takers should be familiar with the format of the test and the kinds of questions asked on the test before they take the exam. Therefore, GMAC® offers the GMATPrep™ software at no charge to all potential test takers. GMATPrep™ software features two full-length, timed, computer-adaptive tests whose delivery simulates that of the actual exam. It includes a set of practice questions for each type of question asked on the exam, answers, and explanations, as well as a comprehensive math review and real-time scoring of the multiple-choice sections.

The complete GMATPrep™ software can be downloaded for free when you sign up as a user on www.mba.com. A free CD-ROM version of the GMATPrep™ software is also offered to those scheduling their first appointment to take the GMAT® exam. The software requires Microsoft®

Windows® (it is not compatible with Apple® Macintosh® computers).

For a more extensive selection of questions, you may wish to purchase The Official Guide for GMAT® Review from the e-store at www.mba.com. The Guide contains more than 800 actual GMAT® questions. If you would like additional practice on either the Verbal or Quantitative Sections, you can purchase The Official Guide for GMAT® Verbal Review and The Official Guide for GMAT® Quantitative Review from the mba.com store. Each of the Supplements includes approximately 300 questions for you to use in your review. (Some questions in the GMATPrep™ review sections may be duplicated in the Guide and the Verbal and Quantitative Supplements.) You can also practice taking the GMAT® exam with the GMAT® Paper Tests available at www.mba.com. Each set of three “retired” tests includes the multiple choice sections of the exam, an answer sheet, and instructions for converting your raw score to the equivalent GMAT® score.

Test-Taking Suggestions

Although each test taker must decide what approach to take in preparing for and taking the GMAT® exam, GMAC® offers the following suggestions:

- Use the allotted testing time wisely by becoming familiar in advance with the test, the kinds of questions asked, and directions for each section. Become familiar with the formats and requirements of each section. Once you start the test, an onscreen clock display will count down the remaining time. You can hide this display if you want, but it is a good idea to check the clock periodically to monitor your progress. The clock will automatically alert you by turning yellow and, if hidden, reappearing when five minutes remain for the section you are working on.
- Read all test directions carefully. The directions explain exactly what is required to answer each type of question. To review directions during the test, click the Help icon, but be aware that this will count against your allotted time for that section of the test.
- Read each question carefully and thoroughly. Before answering a question, determine exactly what is being asked, then eliminate the wrong answers and select the best choice. Never skim a question or the possible answers; skimming may cause you to miss important information or nuances. However, if you do not know the correct answer, or if the question is too time-consuming, try to eliminate choices you know are wrong, select the best of the remaining answer choices, and move on to the next question. Keep moving through the test and try to finish each section. The best strategy is to pace yourself so that you have time to consider each test question and make your best answer choice. You may not skip questions, and randomly guessing answers to questions at the end of each test section can significantly lower your scores.

- Once you have selected your answer to a question you will be asked to confirm it. You should confirm your answer only when you are certain that you want to move on to the next question. Remember, you cannot omit questions or go back and change answers. The computer selects the next question you see based upon your previous responses.

■ Pace yourself so that you have enough time to answer every question. Pay attention to the number of questions and the amount of time remaining during your testing session. On average, you have about 1¾ minutes for each verbal question and about 2 minutes for each quantitative question. (If you do not finish in the allotted time, you will still receive scores as long as you have worked on every section. However, your scores will reflect the number of questions answered, and your score will decrease significantly with each unanswered question.)

- Your GMAT® scores will depend on several characteristics of the questions presented to you, including difficulty level, your answers to those questions, and the number of questions you answer. Adaptive test score calculations do not assign any differential credit to questions depending on where they appear in the test. The questions in an adaptive test are weighted according to their difficulty and other statistical properties, not according to their position in the test.

- To prepare for the Analytical Writing Assessment, practice with sample writing topics listed on www.mba.com or in The Official Guide for GMAT® Review. These topics may appear in your actual GMAT® exam. You will have 30 minutes to compose each essay.

Canceling Your Scores

The only opportunity that you will have to cancel your scores is at the test center on the day of your exam. Immediately after you complete the test—but before you can view your scores—a message will appear asking if you want to cancel your scores. If you choose to cancel your scores, you will not be able to view them. GMAC® cannot honor requests for partial cancellation of GMAT® scores. For instance, you cannot cancel your Analytical Writing Assessment score and keep your Verbal and Quantitative scores. If you cancel your scores—

- they cannot be reinstated;
- you will not be eligible for a refund of any fees; and
- the score cancellation will remain a part of your permanent record and will be reported on future score reports.

Any other cancellation of your score is at the sole discretion of GMAC® and Pearson VUE.

Selecting Your Score-Report Recipients

Before test day, you should decide which GMAT® Programs you want to receive your scores. On the day you take the GMAT® test, before you begin the exam, you will be given the opportunity to select up to five programs to receive your score report. Your basic test registration fee covers the release of your scores only to the programs you select on test day. Once you have made your selections, you will not be able to change or delete the programs you have selected.

After test day, you will be charged a per-program fee to send your scores to any additional graduate management programs. Review the GMAT® Program Code List in Appendix C for a complete list of authorized GMAT® score-report recipients. Most institutions have several programs listed, so be sure you select the right one.

Additional Score Reporting

If you wish to send your scores to any graduate management programs after test day, or if you wish to send your scores to more than five graduate management programs, you may use the Additional Score Reporting service. You will be charged a fee for each additional score report requested. Requests received without payment, or with insufficient payment, will be returned without processing. You will receive a confirmation letter and, if you request, a score report listing the additional programs. Reports will generally be sent within 20 days of the request being received. Scores from all the GMAT® tests you have taken in the last five years will be reported. You may order an Additional Score Report with a credit card by—

- Going online to www.mba.com, or
- Calling GMAT® Customer Service or faxing the Additional Score Report Request Form following the instructions on page 32.

You may also pay by check or money order by mailing the Additional Score Report Request Form to the address provided on page 22.

Recipients selected to receive your scores cannot be changed or deleted once your request has been submitted.

Requests for Additional Score Reports for tests taken more than five (5) years prior to the day you are making the request may be charged an additional fee. You must make requests for older scores by calling GMAT® Customer Service in your region (see page 21 for contact information). These requests may not be made through www.mba.com.

Understanding Your Scores

The GMAT® test yields four scores: Verbal, Quantitative, Total, and Analytical Writing Assessment. Each of these scores is reported on a fixed scale. Total scores range from 200 to 800, with about two-thirds falling between 400 and 600. Verbal and Quantitative scores range from 0 to 60, although scores below 10 and above 50 are rare. The Verbal and Quantitative scores measure different constructs and are not comparable to each other. Analytical writing scores, which range from 0 to 6, are computed separately from the scores for the multiple-choice sections of the test and have no effect on the Verbal, Quantitative, or Total scores. All questions regarding your GMAT® scores must be directed to GMAT® Customer Service (see page 21). Test center staff cannot answer questions about test scores, nor can they help you obtain your official score report.

Score Reports

When you complete the GMAT® test, a screen will appear asking if you want to report your scores or cancel them. If you choose to report your scores, you will be able to view and print an Unofficial Score Report that shows your Quantitative, Verbal, and Total scores. The test administrator will provide you with a printed copy as you leave the testing center. It is important to keep in mind that if you choose to report your scores, you cannot cancel or withdraw them at a later date.

An Official Score Report that includes your Analytical Writing Assessment (AWA) score will be made available to you online and to designated score-report recipients approximately 20 days after the test. If you do not have access to the Internet, you may request to have your scores mailed to you. If you choose to receive your score report by mail, you should allow for possible delivery delays, particularly to addresses outside the United States.

You must respond to both essay questions and work on each multiple-choice section (Verbal and Quantitative) of the test to get an Official Score Report. Official Score Reports include all GMAT® score results you have achieved in the last five years. The contact and demographic information that you were required to provide to register for the test will appear on your score report. The digital photograph, fingerprint, and/or signature you provide at the test center may be sent with your score report to the score recipients you select, if those recipients have asked to receive such information. In addition, if you provided the following background information during registration or on the day of the test, it may also appear on your score report: telephone number; undergraduate institution, grade point average (GPA), major, and date of graduation; intended graduate study; and the highest level of education attained. This information is self-reported and will be marked as such.

You may request additional score reports for tests taken up to ten (10) years prior to the day you are making the request. These scores may be processed for an additional fee. Because scores that are more than five (5) years old are outdated and can present interpretation problems, they will include a statement indicating the special nature of the scores when sent to GMAT® Programs.

How Schools Use and Interpret Scores

GMAT® scores have two important characteristics:

- They are reliable measures of certain developed skills that have been found to be important in the study of management at the graduate level. They have also been shown to be good predictors of academic success in the first year of study at graduate schools of management.

- Unlike undergraduate grade point averages (or assessments) and curricula, which vary in their meaning across institutions, GMAT® scores provide school professionals with a consistent, standardized evaluation tool for all applicants.

GMAC® has published guidelines for the use of GMAT® scores. The guidelines are provided to all graduate management schools that use GMAT® scores and are included on page 10. The test alone does not measure all the characteristics related to success in graduate school. Admissions committees may also consider an applicant's undergraduate record and other information obtained from applications, interviews, and letters of recommendation.

Each school evaluates the scores in its own way; there are no “passing” or “failing” GMAT® scores. Your GMAT® performance can be related by a school to that of the original 1954 scales, the total testing population for the past three (3) years, or others applying to the same school (local norms).

Rescoring Service for Essays

If you believe that your essay scores are not accurate, you may request that your essays be rescored. For a fee, your essays will be rescored by independent readers. The multiple-choice sections of the test cannot be rescored. For current rescoring service fee information, visit www.mba.com. Requests for rescoring must be received within six (6) months of your test date. A request received more than six (6) months after the test date will not be considered.

You may request this service by telephone if paying by credit card. You may also fax or mail a GMAT® Exam Rescore Request form, which you can download from www.mba.com. Contact GMAT® Customer Service as described on page 21 if you need the form faxed or mailed to you. Please refer to “Test Fees” on page 5 for information about payment methods. If you mail or fax your request, include “Attention: GMAT Rescoring Service” on your communication.

Rescoring may result in increases or decreases in your scores. If there is a difference between the original and the later scores, the rescoring results will be final. Revised results will be sent to you and the GMAT® Programs you designated. You will generally be notified of the rescoring results about three weeks after your request is received.

Retaking the GMAT® Exam

Sometimes it is necessary or desirable to take the GMAT® test more than once. For example, a graduate management program may request more recent scores than you have on record. However, unless your scores seem unusually low compared with other indicators of your preparation for graduate management study, or unless there are other reasons to believe that you did not do your best on a test for which scores have been reported, taking the GMAT® test again may not be helpful. It is unlikely to result in a substantial increase in your scores; in fact, your scores may decrease. If you repeat the test, any scores for tests you have taken in the past five (5) years will be reported to the graduate management programs you designate as score recipients. If you repeat the test and want to resend your scores to programs that previously received your scores, you must reselect those GMAT® Programs at the time you take the test or order an Additional Score Report after your exam. Any repeated GMAT® testing is subject to the GMAT® retest policy.

Retest Policy

You may take the GMAT® test only once within any period of 31 consecutive calendar days and no more than five (5) times within any period of 12 consecutive calendar months. In addition, if you score 800 on the exam, you will be prohibited from testing for five (5) years from your exam date. The retest policy applies even if you, Pearson VUE, or GMAC® canceled your scores from a test administration within that time period. GMAT® Customer Service representatives and test administrators are not authorized to waive or modify the retest policy for any reason.

If you take the GMAT® test more often than allowed, your scores from each unauthorized test administration will be withheld or canceled and your entire test fee will be forfeited. You may also be prohibited from future GMAT® testing and may be subject to other remedial actions. This policy has been established to enhance the validity and security of the GMAT® exam. Note that the retest policy will be enforced even if a violation is not immediately identified and test scores have been reported. In such cases, the invalid scores will be canceled, and score-report recipients will be notified of the cancellation.

Permission to take the GMAT® test more than five (5) times within a 12-month period must be submitted in writing. Requests will only be considered after you have taken your fifth test. To make the request, you must complete and return a Request for GMAT® Retest Exception form. To obtain the form, visit www.mba.com or contact Customer Service in your region. Exceptions to the retest policy are entirely discretionary and will be granted only for compelling reasons.

Once you have completed the form, send it to GMAT® Customer Service using the e-mail address, fax number, or mailing address provided on page 21. Include “Attention: Request for GMAT® Retest Exception” in your communication.

Guidelines for the Use of GMAT® Scores

Introduction

These guidelines have been prepared to provide information about the appropriate use of GMAT® scores to evaluate candidates for graduate management study. They are also intended to protect students from unfair decisions based on inappropriate use of scores. The guidelines are based on several policy and psychometric considerations:

- GMAC® has a responsibility to inform users of the scores’ strengths and limitations. Users have a responsibility to use the scores in an appropriate, rather than the most convenient, manner.
- The purpose of any testing instrument, including the GMAT® exam, is to provide information to assist in making decisions; the test alone should not be presumed to be a decision maker.

■ GMAT® test scores are one of a number of sources of information and should be used, whenever possible, in combination with other information and, in every case, with full recognition of what the test can and cannot do. The primary advantage of the GMAT® exam is that it provides a common measure of candidates’ abilities, administered under standardized conditions, with known reliability, validity, and other psychometric qualities. The GMAT® test has two primary limitations: (1) it cannot and does not measure all the qualities important for successful graduate study in management and other related pursuits; and (2) there are psychometric limitations to any test—for example, only score differences of certain magnitudes are reliable indicators of real differences in performance. Such limits should be taken into consideration as GMAT® scores are used.

Specific Guidelines

1. EVALUATE CANDIDATES USING MULTIPLE CRITERIA.

The GMAT® test alone does not measure every skill necessary for graduate management academic work, nor does it measure subjective factors important to academic and career success, such as motivation, creativity, and interpersonal skills. Therefore, all available pertinent information about an applicant should be considered before a selection decision is made. GMAT® scores should be used as only one of several criteria.

2. INTERPRET THE AWA SCORE ON THE BASIS OF THE CRITERIA AND STANDARDS ESTABLISHED IN THE GMAT® SCORING GUIDES.

These criteria and standards are the best source for interpreting the Analytical Writing Assessment (AWA) score. Recognize that the score is based on two 30-minute written responses that represent first-draft writing samples. Each response is evaluated according to the scoring guides, but the average score can result from different combinations of ratings.

3. ESTABLISH THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN GMAT® SCORES AND PERFORMANCE IN YOUR GRADUATE MANAGEMENT SCHOOL.

To the extent feasible, each program using GMAT® scores should demonstrate the relationship between test scores and measures of performance in its academic program by performing a GMAT® Validity

Study. These studies inform graduate management programs about the predictive validity of GMAT® scores relative to their students' first-year academic performance. In addition, other criteria used in combination with test scores should be reviewed to determine whether the weights attached to the particular measures are appropriate for optimizing the prediction of performance in the program.

4. AVOID THE USE OF "CUTOFF" SCORES.

The use of arbitrary cutoff scores (below which no applicant will be considered for admission) is strongly discouraged. Distinctions based on score differences not substantial enough to be statistically meaningful should be avoided. Cutoff scores should be used only when there is clear evidence that a large proportion of the applicants scoring below the cutoff scores cannot perform satisfactory work. In addition, schools should attempt to ensure that the use of cutoff scores does not result in the systematic exclusion of members of either sex, of any age or ethnic groups, or of any other relevant groups.

5. DO NOT COMPARE GMAT® SCORES WITH THOSE ON OTHER TESTS.

Although GMAT® scores may resemble those used for other tests, the scores should not be compared.

General Appropriate Uses of GMAT® Scores

1. FOR SELECTION OF APPLICANTS FOR GRADUATE STUDY IN MANAGEMENT.

A person's GMAT® scores tell you how the person performed on a test designed to measure general verbal, quantitative, and analytical writing skills that are associated with success in the first year of study at graduate schools of management and that have been developed over a long period of time. Scores should be used in conjunction with other information to help estimate performance in a graduate management program.

2. FOR SELECTION OF APPLICANTS FOR FINANCIAL AID BASED ON ACADEMIC POTENTIAL.

3. FOR COUNSELING AND GUIDANCE.

Undergraduate counselors may be able to help students gauge their readiness for graduate management programs.

Inappropriate Uses of GMAT® Scores

1. AS A REQUIREMENT FOR AWARDING A DEGREE.

The GMAT® test is designed for selection for graduate management study, financial aid awards, or counseling and guidance. Any other purpose should be avoided.

2. AS A REQUIREMENT FOR EMPLOYMENT, LICENSING OR CERTIFICATION TO PERFORM A JOB, OR FOR JOB-RELATED REWARDS (RAISES, PROMOTIONS, ETC.).

The use of the GMAT® scores for these purposes is inappropriate. Further, programs using the GMAT® exam may not supply score reports for any of these purposes.

3. AS AN ACHIEVEMENT TEST.

The GMAT® exam is not designed to assess an applicant's achievement or knowledge in specific subject areas.

Just Wanting an MBA is Not Enough

The strongest candidates competing to gain admission to graduate business schools (graduate management programs) are focused on their careers; they are clear about what is needed to get there and what it takes to be successful. Exhibiting undirected thinking or behavior might prevent you from gaining admission to an MBA program. More importantly, you will limit your return on investment if you blindly choose a school or are ill prepared to take advantage of its educational opportunities.

Can you compete favorably? The only way to answer this question is to go through a self-assessment process that will help you identify your personal and career goals. Business school admissions counselors expect to see evidence of your professional interests to ensure that you will take full advantage of the MBA. Following are a few sure signs that you are not ready for a graduate management program:

- When asked about post-MBA career aspirations, you give vague responses, such as: “I want to manage people” or “I want to be in management.”
- You do not have a clear idea what to do with, much less without, an MBA.
- You seek to avoid the job market by buying additional time in school.

Examine Your Goals: Do a Self-Assessment

Lacking specific goals, you will be searching for a school without direction. A good self-assessment process—we suggest using the CareerLeader® assessment—will help you establish specific career and educational goals. This interactive, online tool, available on www.mba.com, analyzes your interests, abilities, and work reward values, giving you valuable information about career paths and work cultures in which you are most likely to thrive. A self-assessment can help you clarify your goals, make wise decisions and develop clear answers to the following questions:

- Why do you want or need an MBA? If you do not pursue an MBA, what are your options?
- Do you have natural aptitudes that others notice? Do those skills lend themselves to particular MBA vocations?
- Do you feel strongly about some function and/or industry within business?
- Do you need any additional resources (training, financial, personal, or professional) to achieve your long-term plans?
- How will you fund your MBA education?
- Are you ready to be a student again? Do you have the discipline and drive?

Identify the Best Schools for You

Apply Effectively

Decision Time

Networking in the Business World

As you decide whether or not to apply to an MBA program, you should network with individuals in professional organizations that support your MBA objectives and solicit their opinions and advice. Talk to many people to get a fair sample of ideas and reduce the chances of obtaining an individual's personal bias. Perhaps the best way you can prepare yourself for potential careers is "informational interviewing" or talking to people who are doing the type of work you might want to pursue. At this stage, it is not necessary for you to know the job you want with 100% certainty, but you must at least have some direction. The value of informational interviewing is that professionals, who may be less willing to talk to you as a job applicant, will often take the time to share their experiences and offer advice. In the early stages of networking, you should cultivate at least one mentor. As you near MBA graduation, individuals in your network should know you well and may assist in your job search.

TIP

Use your network and informational interviews to determine—

- if a certain career path still seems appealing to you after learning more about it;
- if an MBA seems essential, or helpful, to individuals in that career path;
- what gaps exist in your background, experience, or training that could prevent you from achieving your goals or if an MBA internship seems important;
- what expectations and preferences employers in a particular industry may have; and
- how to fine-tune your career plans and related school objectives.

Your Investment of Time and Money

In addition to self-assessment and networking, you must weigh the costs and benefits of your potential MBA investment. Graduate school is likely to be the most substantial investment you will ever make in yourself. Given that 70% of MBA students borrow funds to pay for their education, ask yourself if you are willing to make a similar commitment. Please go to www.mba.com, for some factors you should consider when doing a "cost" versus "benefit" analysis.

Choose a Program Type

A Range of Options

Before you can begin comparing specific graduate management programs, make sure you select the type of degree program best suited to your future career path. This will help you narrow the field of possibilities. In light of your personal goals, consider the issue of program type and its implications relative to the following:

Curriculum: Do you already have a functional or industry specialty, or do you need an MBA to develop one?

Career Path: Is an MBA required for you to advance in your field or company, or are you looking to transition into a completely different function or industry?

Career Counseling: Do you need job search assistance or counseling? Do you plan to stay with your current employer after earning your degree?

Lifestyle/Environment: Are you ready to assume the responsibilities of an MBA-level position? How do you define work/life balance? What kinds of learning environments work best for you? Can you relocate?

Overall Cost and Financial Aid Opportunities: Do you need to continue working full time? Are you company sponsored? Do you need financial aid?

TIP

As you are considering an MBA, keep in mind there is not an excess of MBA talent in the market.

Most graduating MBAs secure multiple job offers—numerous opportunities exist for qualified candidates who present themselves and their credentials well. In a tight economy, the broader and more flexible your skill set, the more marketable you are. Whenever employers utilize fewer staff that must perform more tasks, employers value the broad MBA education. Smaller organizations place a high value on candidates who already possess advanced training and cross-functional skill sets. The job market for MBAs extends beyond the traditional multinational corporations to small and midsize companies that offer a wide array of opportunities for MBAs.

Following are very brief descriptions of some of the different types of MBA programs. Each has its own advantages and disadvantages relative to your educational and professional goals. A discussion of these advantages and disadvantages can be found on www.mba.com.

TWO-YEAR, FULL-TIME MBA PROGRAMS (18 TO 24 MONTHS)

Two-year, full-time MBA programs are typically four semesters of study spread over two academic years, with a three- or four-month period for an internship. The first year of study includes the core courses required of all MBAs. Choosing a specific concentration of study and electives occurs in the second year. The program is designed with the expectation that students are available during the business week for their studies and do not work full time. Relocation may be required to attend a program of choice.

ONE-YEAR, FULL-TIME MBA PROGRAMS (11 TO 16 MONTHS)

One-year, full-time MBA programs vary greatly from their two-year counterparts and often from one another. The length of the program is shorter because: (a) time in core classes is reduced or (b) limits are placed on opportunities to specialize. Often these programs have strict prerequisites for experience and/or academic background. Internship opportunities are limited, with no extended break between semesters. The program is designed with the expectation that students are available during the business week for their studies and do not work full time. Relocation may be required to attend a program of choice.

PART-TIME PROGRAMS

Part-time programs are designed for working professionals. They may require the same number of courses as their full-time counterparts, but courses are usually scheduled year-round and for a longer period of time. Part-time programs may offer the same ability to specialize as full-time programs, but do not provide the opportunity for internships.

EXECUTIVE MBA (EMBA) PROGRAMS

EMBA programs are geared toward company-sponsored executives who have substantial experience. Classes generally meet on weekends or alternate weekends (Fridays and Saturdays) for up to two academic years. The EMBA program curriculum is designed to further executives' general management skills across all disciplines. There are limited or no opportunities to specialize; the underlying assumption is that executives are already specialists in a field or industry.

DISTANCE LEARNING PROGRAMS

Distance learning is a popular method of instruction via tools like the Internet, e-mail, and other interactive systems. This technology enables schools to experiment aggressively with unique modes of teaching.

JOINT OR DUAL DEGREE PROGRAMS:

A joint or dual degree program is generally a full-time MBA program partnered with another graduate program, each requiring separate admission. The total time to complete both degrees is condensed. Typical graduate options coupled with the MBA include law, healthcare, engineering, technology, international studies, and public policy.

SPECIALTY PROGRAMS

Specialty programs are very career specific (e.g., Master of Accountancy, Master of Healthcare/Hospital Administration, and Master of Computational Finance). Planning and researching your chosen industry will help you determine whether a specialty program is a better option than a generalist MBA degree.

TIP

Understand that an average is derived.

Averages should be viewed as working estimates of what may be possible. The "average" MBA graduate is not a summary description of any one person and it's unlikely that any graduate had all of the following: average GPA, average GMAT® scores, average years of pre-MBA work experience, average scholarship amount, average internship wage, average time to secure a permanent job, and average full-time starting salary upon graduation. Pay attention to ranges rather than averages.

EXECUTIVE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

Executive development programs range from nondegree seminars to certificate programs and can consist of one or more sessions.

Identify the Best Schools for You

The Research Process

Although there are more than 3,000 graduate management programs worldwide that accept the GMAT® test, only a fraction of them will be a good match for you. There are several effective ways to identify the type of MBA program that will best serve you. First, identify a broad range of schools that appear to meet your future career path needs. Second, do more in-depth research to eliminate any schools that do not closely match your personal and professional goals. There are two components to this process: (1) identify where you can find the information and (2) identify what information is critical and should be examined from each of your sources.

Where to Gather Information

SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS AND MATERIALS

Look at each school's electronic and print publications, including brochures, application materials and Web sites. These materials provide evidence of what the school values most in its students and also what it considers to be its strengths. Visit www.mba.com and use the school search service for direct links to more than 750 MBA programs, representing more than 350 schools worldwide.

ADMISSIONS STAFF

Admissions staff are valuable resources for clarifying what you have read and providing anecdotal information beyond what is found in published materials. In your conversations with admissions staff, remember to provide key information about your background and interests. Ask clarifying questions, such as: "What parts of the application do you weigh most heavily?" or "Is there a difference in who you admit early in the process versus later?" Avoid asking vague questions, such as: "Why should I come to your school?" or "Will I be able to get a scholarship?"

CURRENT STUDENTS AND ALUMNI

Students and recent alumni are the best sources of information on a school's culture and learning environment. However, do not expect them to be authorities on application requirements, deadlines, or school policies.

SCHOOL CAREER SERVICES STAFF

Career Services staff are the best authority on whether your MBA career aspirations are likely to be satisfied at their schools. Review published placement statistics, and do not ask questions of the staff when you can find the answer in print. Ask, for instance, if they have worked with students whose backgrounds and aspirations are similar to yours. If so, ask how successful those graduates were in securing internships and jobs. In addition, you should, however, ask clarifying questions, such as: "Can you separate your consulting average by specialties?" or "Of your marketing graduates, what percentage went into brand management?"

TIP

Beware the numbers.

Use career services statistics to gain a general sense—not an expectation—of your potential MBA income.

As you look at salary statistics, remember that an MBA is not a guarantee that you will earn the same starting salary two years from now as someone with similar credentials today. The economy when you graduate could be very different.

Ask what percentage of the class reported job offers and at what point in the year. Students with great job offers are more likely to report information for the record early. Moreover, if placement data are calculated early in the placement season, statistics are likely to reflect mostly the high end of the salary range.

Consider geographic differences in terms of economics and cost of living.

Find out how the career services office works with students who are not placed by graduation and if the school offers career services assistance for alumni.

MEDIA, GUIDEBOOKS, AND THE POPULAR BUSINESS PRESS

While MBA applicants frequently cite the numerous business school books, research articles, and comparison studies as valuable for learning about programs, do not rely only on secondary sources of information to do your research. You are assured of receiving the most up-to-date and accurate material directly from each school. The further you inquire, the more balanced your understanding of the schools will become. Highly disputed, but widely used, are the publications that rank MBA programs. Go to www.mba.com for some important precautions to keep in mind when using these rankings.

COLLEAGUES

Although you might want to be careful about publicizing your MBA plans at work, you should seek the opinions of people you trust and respect in the business world. If you work with MBAs, find out about their experiences, and ask what they perceive as your personal and professional strengths.

HUMAN RESOURCES (HR) STAFF

Contact corporate HR representatives if you are interested in a specific industry or field. Managers of Campus Recruiting, Directors of MBA Recruiting, or Managers of College/University Relations can be valuable sources of information. Describe your own background and intentions for MBA study and ask questions, such as: “What types of MBAs do you seek?” or “Where do you recruit?” Not only will you gain helpful information, but you will also establish valuable networking contacts for your MBA internship search.

What to Ask

To be a savvy consumer of MBA education, you must thoroughly investigate each school’s attributes to uncover concrete evidence that your priorities and expectations will be satisfied. To that end, collect evidence within each of the following areas:

CORE COURSES

Core courses lay the foundation for the program and are usually sequenced at the beginning of study. Consider the following issues:

- How much input do you have in how your classes are sequenced? Because core classes are prerequisites for taking subsequent courses in a discipline, the sequence determines how quickly you can develop a functional specialty.
- Can you exempt any of the required courses? Are exemptions based on previous course work, professional designations, or examination results? How do exemptions affect your program options?
- Consider access to faculty and structure of learning, instead of class size.

ELECTIVES

Within the general MBA program, you build your area of expertise through elective courses or subjects of study. To effectively judge how the curriculum will help you, examine the following:

- How many electives are offered and how often?
- Are concentrations required and can you have more than one? Do you get scheduling priority for courses in your concentration? Can you design your own concentration?

TIP

Curricular Prerequisites

Most graduate management programs accept applicants from a wide range of undergraduate backgrounds. Schools may ask you to take specific course work prior to enrollment to address deficiencies in your academic background. Be proactive:

You know your weaknesses; do not wait for an admissions committee to tell you to take supplementary course work.

Allow yourself sufficient time to complete prerequisite work prior to MBA enrollment.

- Are there additional courses in other areas that can help you meet your goals? Can you take a course outside of the business school but within the university for MBA credit?
- Under what circumstances are courses canceled? How often does this occur?
- What is the average class size, structure of learning, and access to faculty?
- Can you transfer any credits from previous course work?

REGISTRATION AND COURSE SELECTION

Examine the process of registration and course selection:

- How does scheduling work (e.g., open enrollment, lottery system)? What are your chances of getting spaces in the classes you need, when you need them?
- When are course schedules finalized? How, when, and under what circumstances can you change them?
- What is a typical course load? Are there limits per term, semester, or year?
- Is there an academic advising system?

TEACHING APPROACHES

A school’s philosophy on approaches to learning can vary substantially, so you should become familiar with

TIP

Budget for Applications!

Costs add up quickly, so be realistic about what you will spend to apply to each school.

- Application fees (ranging from US$40 to US$250)
- Testing fees, test-preparation materials, and other miscellaneous costs
- Transcript request fees
- Phone calls
- Travel expenses for recruiting events, interviews, or campus visits
- Postage or express delivery services the mix of instructional techniques that graduate management programs use. Find out—

- if the school prescribes a uniform teaching or grading style within the program, or if it is left up to each faculty member;
- if most professors prefer the case method of teaching—where a students' contributions in class are the central to the learning process—or the lecture approach—where the faculty member drives the subject matter.
- what forms of feedback are formalized between students and faculty; and
- how group work is viewed and measured.

FACULTY

A sizable part of a school's reputation is related to its focus on research, and faculty renown strengthens industry ties and promotes an MBA program's brand, helping graduates secure jobs. Most schools try to adopt a balanced approach to teaching quality and faculty research, because quality research leads to highly relevant teaching. A school's emphasis on teaching versus research will determine the type of faculty it attracts. To find out where a school stands on this issue, ask:

- What attracts faculty to the school and what keeps them there?
- Are the faculty known for their academic research, teaching quality, accessibility to students, or a combination?
- How active are faculty members in professional associations and in the corporate world? How do those connections enrich your experience?
- What is the student-to-faculty ratio and your access to professors?

CAREER SERVICES

Examining career services is one way to gauge how the outside world values the MBAs who graduate from a school. Research:

- How graduates from the school have done in your planned career path.
- What career services the career office provides and for whom.
- The experiences and philosophies of the career services staff. Do they have a strong history with alumni and how well do they get to know individual students?
- The percentage of students who use the school's career services services. What percentage of students secure jobs through campus recruiting in your planned career?
- If faculty get involved in career services activities.

TIP

Live like a student before you become one.

If you need to borrow funds for the MBA, make sure you can secure financing.

Make sure you are credit ready (you have not defaulted on any loan) and credit worthy (you have established good credit) so that you can borrow if necessary.

Begin to reduce the number of credit cards you hold and their balances.

Pretend you are on a student budget.

FINANCIAL AID

While varying widely from school to school, there are two types of costs that make up the total cost of education—direct and indirect. Direct costs (e.g., tuition, student fees, books, and supplies) are those associated with your enrollment and fees that you normally pay directly to the school. Indirect costs (e.g., housing, utilities, food, personal expenses, and transportation) are those living expenses incurred while attending business school. At this point in your examination of schools, you should not eliminate a school based on cost. Instead, explore scholarships, fellowships, teaching assistantships, and other sources of financial aid that may be available through each of the schools you are interested in attending. Consider the following:

- Are awards based on merit, need, or both? What information does the school use?
- When are award decisions made—with application decisions or later?
- Are there different requirements for schools outside your home country?
- If you are not awarded financial aid initially, what are your chances for awards later?

Unless you are able to pay for your education expenses without any financial assistance, it is probable that most of the financial aid you will be offered will be in the form of loans. The MBA LOANS® program is the only loan program endorsed by the Graduate Management Admission Council® (GMAC®), as part of our mission to promote access to graduate management education.

LIFESTYLE AND OTHER CONSIDERATIONS

Your MBA experience will encompass many factors beyond academic life. Once you have identified schools that appear to satisfy your academic and career goals, question their fit in light of your lifestyle and environmental preferences. For a list of factors to consider, go to www.mba.com.

Reality Check

Compare yourself to the typical student profile at each program. In a competitive application process, you must use your personal judgment to determine which schools are worth your investment of time and money. As a savvy consumer, ensure that the institutions possess the curricular strength, culture, and program philosophy that best meet your needs.

Apply Effectively

Application and Selection Process

Each admissions professional is charged with making the best possible selections—from a large pool of applicants—for a limited number of spaces in a class. In general, most admissions professionals evaluate candidates' potential success (both academic and professional) against the strengths, limitations, content, and culture of the schools' MBA programs. Factors such as academic record, recommendations, and work experience will be used to judge your potential for success relative to the overall pool of applicants. Before you submit your applications, ask yourself the following questions:

- Is this really the best time for you to go to business school?
- Is your career limited to your current level without an MBA?
- Do you need more time to develop your professional skill set or save money for business school?
- Are you approaching the level of experience that limits the financial leverage provided by certain types of MBA programs?

Application Criteria

Be aware that not all schools will require all of the admissions criteria described on the following pages. It is imperative that you read each school's application instructions carefully.

GMAT® TEST

The Graduate Management Admission Test® (GMAT®) is specifically designed to help graduate management programs assess the qualification of applicants for advanced study in business and management. The GMAT® exam does not measure every discipline-related skill necessary for academic work, nor does it measure subjective factors important to academic and career success (e.g., motivation, creativity, interpersonal skills, study skills, or overall success on the job). Find out from each school how scores will be factored into the admissions decision.

ACADEMIC RECORD

Every school wants students to succeed academically and admissions staff will examine your academic record to predict future performance. Preferably, the two academic measures in your application, GMAT® scores and GPA, should both be strong. If one is weak, the other needs to be strong enough to compensate. Be ready to explain if your undergraduate record is less than stellar. Unlike many other types of master's programs, the MBA does not have a standard or preferred undergraduate major. However, if you have taken any undergraduate or post-undergraduate business courses or if you have earned another graduate degree, MBA admissions staff will take note of your performance. When applying to programs outside your home country, ensure that your education meets the requirements of the graduate management programs you choose.

TIP

Not staying in your home country?

You will need a student visa to study in a country where you are not a citizen.

Proof of sufficient funds (i.e., all school-related and living expenses for the duration of the program) may be required in order for you to obtain the necessary visa.

Obtaining your student visa can be a lengthy process, so plan accordingly.

A student visa may restrict you from working, so make sure you have enough money.

TIP

1. Who is your competition?

Despite whatever historical information is published, you will never have a full understanding of a school's current applicant pool. Understand that if a school accepts 33% of its applicants, it does not mean that you have a one in three chance of gaining admission. Your credentials may be strong enough that you have a very good probability of acceptance, or they may be so weak that you are unlikely to gain admission. Before preparing your application, compare the published student profile against your own GPA, GMAT® scores, education, work experience, and accomplishments and address any weaknesses in your application.

2. Retesting

If you feel that you could improve your total GMAT® score, consider retesting after additional preparation. Most schools will consider your best score.

RECOMMENDATIONS

When selecting individuals to write recommendations on your behalf, choose those who can provide insight into your relevant professional skills and know about your plans for MBA study. These references can include employers, colleagues, or others who have had to rely on your work. (An academic reference does not usually meet this requirement.) Make sure that you understand each school's policy regarding recommendations, including the required number. Do not exceed that number without prior agreement from the school.

WORK EXPERIENCE

Business schools are significantly different from other graduate programs in their expectations for work experience. Work experience will be considered for the same reason as past academic experience. What you have accomplished (both quality and quantity of work) is used to predict your future work performance. In measuring the value of your work experience, admissions staff will carefully review your resume and will expect to see how your current career interests can be coupled with your past experience and an MBA. If the quality of your experience is good, the quantity may become less important—especially if you have reached a plateau in your career. If you have sufficient, but inconsistent (e.g., frequent job changes) work experience, it may be considered weak. Be prepared to discuss your experience in admissions interviews and essays.

TIP

Experience Versus Exposure

Most business courses draw upon the students' past full-time, post-undergraduate work experiences through frequent class participation and group work. If you lack that vital experience, you may not be viewed as strongly as a candidate with similar academic credentials who can also share work insights with classmates. Some schools require a minimum level of post-undergraduate work experience and the average age of matriculating business school students worldwide is 28.

INTERVIEWS

Interview policy varies from school to school—from interviewing all applicants to not interviewing any. Be sure you understand how your interview will be used in the selection process. For more information about how schools might use interviews and how to prepare for them, visit www.mba.com. Because schools vary in their approaches, make sure you ask what is preferred. In your interview, do not ask questions that can easily be answered by reading the school's materials ahead of time. The questions you ask are a reflection of your preparation and understanding of the program.

EXTRACURRICULAR AND COMMUNITY ACTIVITIES

Extracurricular and community activities can demonstrate your leadership potential and ability to balance personal and professional interests. If you list membership in any organization, you must be able to talk about what you personally contributed.

ESSAYS

Answer the questions as written! You would be amazed at how many applicants fail to address the specific topics indicated. To sell yourself as an applicant, you must articulate how your interests and abilities align with the particular features of a business school, such as special courses, faculty research interests, or specific corporate relationships. You should demonstrate in your essays that you have researched the MBA program. Essays should (1) be reasonably specific; (2) address the particular school and program in question; (3) stay within the word limit specified; (4) reinforce the other pieces of your application; and (5) be carefully written with attention to content, delivery, and grammar.

Diversity

Most schools look to enrich the education and life experiences of all students by creating the most diverse (e.g., geographic, cultural, ethnic, and experiential) class possible. Make sure you highlight your individuality in your application.

School Ties

If you have a family member who graduated from a school that interests you, use that person to provide insight into the program. Do not try and leverage your connections to gain a spot in the class.

Enhancing Your Application

Following are a few suggestions for enhancing your application. To fully understand the importance of each, go to www.mba.com.

To enhance your application—

- Highlight and showcase your positive attributes.
- Be sure to acknowledge your weaknesses.
- Compare your goals to the school's strengths.
- Remember that earlier is better.
- Provide only pertinent, requested information completely and accurately. Do not include highly personal information that is not relevant to your application.

Decision Time

The Hard Part

Once you hold the application decision letter(s), the options available to you may not be what you expected. It is impossible to predict the final combination of responses that you will receive. To see a full discussion of each response, please visit www.mba.com.

Final Application Checklist

- ☐ Your application should be typed, complete, and organized.
- ☐ Make sure you send the right materials to the right schools.
- ☐ Submit the applications online or on paper, depending on the schools' preferences.
- ☐ Finally, complete the entire application. Skipping sections will make you appear lazy, sloppy, or uninterested.

Passion + Purpose = Professor

You have a passion within. And the PhD ProjectSM will let it out. If you are of African American, Hispanic American, or Native American descent, we have an inspiring program for you that will bring education to the forefront of your life, and the lives of countless others.

The PhD ProjectSM provides access to a broad range of information, resources, and contacts in doctoral studies in the business area. At our annual conference held each November and fully subsidized, you will learn firsthand about the impact you can make as a professor for generations to come.

Being a role model at the front of the classroom is something that will affect the entire business world. Your drive to succeed, your will to give back to your community, and your passion to educate will ultimately create a better, more diverse future for everyone.

Test Complaints or Concerns

If you have already taken the GMAT® test and have a complaint or concern about the test or a test center, send your written complaint or concern by e-mail, fax, or mail immediately following the test administration. Use the information provided under "GMAT® Customer Service" and include "Attention: GMAT Complaints" in your communication.

Reporting Testing Violations

The GMAT® test is administered under strict supervision and security measures. Nevertheless, some test takers may disregard the rules in an effort to gain an unfair advantage. Please report to the test administrator or Pearson VUE any questionable behavior you observe, such as a test taker receiving assistance or copying from another test taker, taking a test for someone else, having access to secure test questions before or after the exam, attempting to record or otherwise capture test questions during the exam, or using notes or unauthorized aids. GMAC® reserves the right to contact schools and take other appropriate actions with respect to the individuals who violate GMAT® testing terms and conditions. Report violations using the following information. Our policy is to keep the names of individuals reporting such information confidential.

Additional Terms and Conditions

Test Policies and Procedures

GMAC® and Pearson VUE have established terms and conditions, including testing policies and procedures to enhance the testing environment and the validity and security of the GMAT® test. When you register for the GMAT® test, you are agreeing to all terms and conditions contained in the GMAT® Information Bulletin in effect at the time of testing, including without limitation privacy policies describing the collection, processing, use and transmission to the United States of personally identifiable data and the disclosure of such data to GMAC®, its service providers and others as stated in the Bulletin.

Test Administration

Test administration begins at check-in, ends at check-out, and includes breaks. Test administrators are required to report any violation of testing policies or procedures and any other irregularity.

■ When you check in at the test center, the test administrator will ask you to present valid identification as noted on page 7. The administrator will also ask you to confirm your agreement to the GMAT® Examination Testing Rules and Agreement.

■ The test administrator will digitally take your fingerprint, signature, and photograph. Audio and video are recorded in the testing room at all centers during the exam. If you refuse to participate in any part of the check-in process, you will not be permitted to test and you will forfeit your test fee. Note: This is in addition to the requirement that you must present acceptable and valid identification.

■ Before you start the GMAT® exam on a test center workstation, you will be asked to agree to the GMAT® Nondisclosure Agreement and General Terms of Use statement. Electronic confirmation of your agreement is required. If you do not agree to the statement, you will not be permitted to take the test and you will forfeit your entire test fee.

■ No testing aids are permitted during the test session or during breaks. Aids include but are not limited to beepers, pagers, pens, calculators, watch calculators, books, pamphlets, notes, blank sheets of paper, rulers, stereos or radios, telephones or cellular (mobile) phones, stopwatches, watch alarms (including those with flashing lights or alarm sounds), dictionaries, translators, thesauri, personal data assistants (PDAs), and any other electronic or photographic devices or potential aids of any kind.

■ The test administrator will provide you with two erasable noteboards. If you fill up your noteboards during the test, please raise your hand; the administrator will collect the noteboards you have and give you replacements. You may not remove the noteboards from the testing room and you must return them to the administrator after the test.

■ Testing must begin promptly once you are seated at the computer. The length of your appointment is approximately four hours.

■ Two optional breaks are scheduled during the test administration. If you exceed the time allowed for these breaks, the excess time will automatically be deducted from the next section of the test.

■ Testing premises are subject to audio/video recording and other monitoring.

■ You may not communicate with anyone about the content of the GMAT® test while the test session is in progress, during any breaks, or after administration of the test.

■ You will not be allowed to eat, drink, or use tobacco in the test center—you may store such items in a locker and take them outside the test center during breaks.

■ You will not be permitted to leave the testing room without the test administrator's permission. You will be required to provide a digital fingerprint any time you leave or enter the testing room.

■ During a break, you are required to remain in the test center building or in the immediate area. This policy varies depending on the test center location, and it is your responsibility to ask the test administrator where you are permitted to go—for example, to the nearest restroom or smoking area. If you violate test center policy, the administrator may refuse to allow you to reenter the testing room and continue your exam. Again, if you exceed the time allowed for each optional break, the extra time is deducted from your remaining exam time.

■ Access to telephones, cellular (mobile) phones, or other communication devices will not be permitted during the test session or during breaks.

■ For the Analytical Writing Assessment (AWA) section of the GMAT® test, you will be required to compose two original essays. Plagiarism in any form is unacceptable. GMAC® and Pearson VUE reserve the right to cancel GMAT® test scores when, in their judgment, there is evidence of plagiarism. As with all other test records, the AWA essays are the property of GMAC®, not examinees.

■ Removing or attempting to remove test content from the test center is strictly prohibited. Under no circumstances may any part of the test content viewed during a test administration be removed, reproduced, and/or disclosed in any form by any means (for example, verbally, in writing, or electronically) to any person or entity at any time. This includes, but is not limited to, discussing or disclosing such test content via e-mail; in any Internet “chat room,” message board, or other forum; or otherwise. This disclosure prohibition applies before, during, and after any administration of the GMAT® exam.

■ You may not leave your workstation while timed sections of the test are being administered. If, due to an emergency, you must leave your seat during the test session, raise your hand and notify the test administrator. The time clock for the test section you are working on will not stop during your absence. Repeated or lengthy departures from your workstation will be documented and reported by the administrator.

■ If you have placed personal items—such as a cellular (mobile) phone, briefcase, or study materials—in a locker at the test center, you will not have access to these items during the test session or during breaks.

■ Raise your hand to notify the test administrator if you believe you have a problem with your computer, need a new notepad, or need the administrator for any other reason.

■ Disruptive behavior in any form will not be tolerated. The test administrator has sole discretion in determining what constitutes disruptive behavior. To understand the consequences of disruption, please see the “Misconduct” section on the following page.

■ Once you have completed the exam, you will receive a series of questions asking about your demographics, background, plans for graduate school, and whether you would like to participate in surveys or receive information from GMAC®, graduate business schools, scholarship-granting organizations, and/or certain strategic partners of GMAC® participating in the Graduate Management Admission Search Service® (GMAS®). The answers to these questions may be prepopulated with answers you previously provided.

■ The test administrator is authorized to dismiss you from a test session for various reasons, including without limitation providing false information; attempting to take the test for someone else; failing to provide acceptable identification; possessing unauthorized personal items or testing aids; refusing to comply with an administrator's reasonable requests; giving or receiving unauthorized help; attempting to tamper with the operation of the computer; refusing to follow directions; or failing to adhere to any other procedure, policy, or rule.

Note: GMAC® and Pearson VUE reserve the right to take all action that they deem appropriate if an individual fails to comply with the test terms and conditions or the test administrator's directions. This includes but is not limited to barring an individual from future testing, canceling or withholding the individual's scores, and/or reporting any rule violations, fraud, or other irregularities to schools or other appropriate third parties, including law enforcement authorities. If your scores are canceled or withheld, they will not be reported and your entire test fee will be forfeited. For additional information about cancellation or withholding of scores by Pearson VUE or GMAC®, see page 8.

TEST SECURITY ISSUES

GMAC® and Pearson VUE strive to report scores that accurately reflect the skill and performance of each test taker. Accordingly, our standards and procedures for administering tests have two related goals: giving test takers comparable opportunities to demonstrate their abilities, and preventing any test takers from gaining an unfair advantage over others. To promote these objectives, we reserve the right to cancel or withhold any test scores when, in our judgment, a testing irregularity occurs, there is an apparent discrepancy in, or falsification of, a test taker's identification, a test taker engages in misconduct or plagiarism, or the scores are believed to be invalid for any other reason. When GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE cancels test scores that have already been reported, score recipients will generally be told that the scores have been canceled but not the reason for cancellation, unless requested by the test taker; however, GMAC® and Pearson VUE reserve the right in all cases to report the reason for a score cancellation. We also reserve the right to prohibit a test taker from future GMAT® testing and to pursue other remedies.

TESTING IRREGULARITIES

The phrase “testing irregularities” refers to events that affect the administration of a test. When testing irregularities occur, they may affect an individual examinee or groups of test takers. Such irregularities include, but are not limited to, administrative errors (such as improper timing, improper seating, defective materials, or defective equipment); improper or inadvertent access to or disclosure of test content involving individuals who cannot be identified; and disruptions of test administrations (such as natural disasters or other emergencies). If a testing irregularity occurs, GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE may decline to score the applicable test(s), or may cancel or withhold test scores. When, in our sole judgment, it is appropriate to do so, we give affected test takers the opportunity to take the test again as soon as possible without charge.

IDENTIFICATION DISCREPANCIES

When, in the judgment of GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE or the judgment of test center personnel, there is a discrepancy in, or falsification of, a test taker's identification, the test taker may be denied access to or dismissed from the test center; in addition, we may decline to score the test, cancel or withhold the test scores, and pursue other appropriate remedies.

MISCONDUCT

When, in the judgment of GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE or the judgment of the test center personnel, there is misconduct in connection with a test, the test taker may be dismissed from the test center; in addition, we may decline to score the test, cancel or withhold the test scores, and pursue other appropriate remedies. Misconduct includes, but is not limited to, noncompliance with any terms and conditions described in this Bulletin (for example, the policies, procedures, and rules stated herein) and those stated in the GMAT® Examination Testing Rules and Agreement and GMAT® Nondisclosure Agreement and General Terms of Use statement that must be agreed to at the test center. Misconduct also includes any unauthorized access to or disclosure of secure test content prior to, during, or after the test administration.

INVALID SCORES

GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE may also cancel or withhold scores if, in our judgment, there is a good faith basis to question the validity of the scores for any other reason. Evidence of invalid scores may include, without limitation, unusual answer patterns, unusual score increases from one exam to another, inconsistent performance on different parts of the test, or failure to obey exam administration rules.

CHALLENGING A DECISION TO CANCEL OR WITHHOLD SCORES

In some, but not all, situations, GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE will notify the test taker in writing in advance about a planned score cancellation or invalidation, give the test taker an opportunity to submit information that addresses the concerns raised, consider any information that is submitted, and offer the test taker a choice of options. The options may include voluntary score cancellation, a free retest, and appealing the cancellation decision through procedures provided by GMAC® or Pearson VUE. In any such appeal, the issue to be decided would be whether GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE had a good faith reason to question the validity of the GMAT® score.

There are circumstances, however, in which examinees may have their scores canceled or withheld without prior notice or an opportunity to appeal.

Those circumstances generally involve disruptions by an examinee during exam administration, advance disclosure of exam content (even if a specific examinee's actual access to disclosed test content cannot be confirmed by GMAC® or Pearson VUE), and cases in which an examinee is observed violating exam policies by a test administrator and is discharged from the testing site; in these situations, examinees will simply be informed that their scores have been canceled or invalidated.

Releasing Scores and Other Examinee Information

GMAC® recognizes a responsibility to safeguard the information in its files from unauthorized or inappropriate disclosure. GMAT® scores and other personally identifiable examinee information will be released only at your specific request unless required by law, as provided in the Privacy Policy on page 25 and on www.mba.com, as necessary to detect or prevent unlawful activity, or to cooperate in a judicial or governmental proceeding.

Note: Your GMAT® scores and other information in the files of GMAC® or its service providers may be released to third parties (such as government agencies or parties to a lawsuit) if requested pursuant to a subpoena or otherwise in a legal proceeding, or as necessary to detect or prevent unlawful activity to protect the security and integrity of the GMAT® exam.

Please review the Privacy Policy on page 25 carefully because you will be bound by its terms.

See "Score Reports" on page 9 and the Privacy Policy on page 25 for more information.

Ownership of Scores, Essays, and Other Measurement Information

GMAT® scores, responses to test questions, and AWA essays are measurement information and are part of your test record. These and other test records are owned by GMAC®. They are not the property of the examinee. However, the use, reporting, and cancellation of scores are subject to various rights and restrictions as indicated in this Bulletin.

The GMAT® Exam Is Valuable Intellectual Property

The various components that comprise the GMAT® test, including, but not limited to, the GMAT® test questions, software and algorithm, are embodiments of valuable intellectual property rights of GMAC®, ACT, and/or Pearson VUE. These rights include, but are not limited to, copyright and/or trade secret rights, and they are zealously protected. In particular, the GMAT® test questions administered at test centers are valuable copyrighted, trade secret property of GMAC®. These test questions have not been previously published or disclosed to the public at large. Before you take the GMAT® exam, you agree to maintain the confidentiality of all test questions administered to you during the test. A disclosure of test questions in any form by any means in violation of this confidentiality agreement undermines the integrity and security of the GMAT® exam.

Any unauthorized access, reproduction, distribution, or disclosure of GMAT® test questions before, during, or after you take the GMAT® test is a violation of U.S. and international intellectual property laws and treaties. We will pursue all available remedies (including those enumerated in this Bulletin), which may include prosecution to the maximum extent possible under such laws and may result in severe civil and criminal penalties.

Examinee Remedies

ERRORS IN REGISTRATION, TEST DEVELOPMENT, TEST ADMINISTRATION OR SCORING

GMAC®, Pearson VUE, and ACT make every effort to ensure that GMAT® test registration and scheduling information is properly processed, and that GMAT® tests are properly prepared, handled, administered, and scored. In the unlikely event that an error occurs in the preparation, handling, processing, administration or scoring of your GMAT® test, or in the reporting of your GMAT® scores, GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE will make reasonable efforts to correct the error. If the error cannot be corrected, you may reschedule your appointment at no additional fee or request a refund.

These remedies are the exclusive remedies available to examinees for errors that occur during the registration or scheduling process; in preparing, administering, printing, handling, or processing exams; or in determining or reporting scores.

DISRUPTIONS IN TESTING AND POTENTIAL COMPROMISES

GMAC®, Pearson VUE, and ACT also endeavor to ensure that the GMAT® test is administered in a standardized and uninterrupted manner. If events occur that cause testing to be canceled or interrupted, involve a mistiming on any part of the test, result in a deviation from required testing procedures, raise concerns about possible advance access to exam content by one or more examinees, or otherwise disrupt or compromise the normal testing process, GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE will examine the situation and determine if corrective action is warranted, including score cancellation(s) or non-scoring of exams. If GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE, in their sole discretion, determine that such action is warranted, each affected examinee will be offered the option either to retest at no additional fee or to receive a refund of his or her examination fee (unless the affected examinee is found to have caused or been involved in the conduct which resulted in the corrective action, in which event GMAC® and/or Pearson VUE shall have the right to withhold either or both of these options and to pursue all available remedies with respect to that examinee). If a retest is offered and an examinee selects that option, the examinee must retake the entire exam in order to produce a valid score.

These remedies are the exclusive remedies available to examinees affected by disruptions in testing or potential compromises through prior access to exam content by one or more examinees.

Privacy Policy

When GMAT® registrants, test takers, and others who participate in GMAC® programs or purchase GMAC® education-related products provide data to GMAC®, we process their data in accordance with the Privacy Policy in effect when the data is collected. This data will include data used primarily for identity verification and protecting the security and integrity of the test, such as the digital fingerprint, photograph, signature, and audio/video recording collected at the test center. To view the current Privacy Policy, including its description of current data collection, processing, use, and transmission to the United States; information concerning GMAC® program partners and service providers; and a link to the “GMAC® Statement of Privacy Principles,” please visit www.mba.com/privacy.

Collection and Use of Your Information

You may register for the GMAT® exam through GMAT® Customer Service via telephone, fax, or mail, or on our Web site at www.mba.com. To administer the GMAT® exam, we require test takers to provide certain personal information. We clearly identify data that must be provided for you to be able to take the exam. We also identify information required for you to purchase GMAC® products or voluntarily participate in other GMAC® programs or services. You may choose to provide additional or optional information to enhance the services provided to you. The categories of information we may collect include:

- contact information, including full legal name, address, telephone or fax number, and e-mail address;
- background information such as demographics, country of citizenship, and education history, and for United States citizens only, race, ethnicity, and the last four digits of their U.S. Social Security number;
- payment information required to take the GMAT® exam or for related products, facilitated by Pearson VUE and, at times, other service providers;
- data used to verify your identity during GMAT® registration and at test centers, and to help your selected score recipients verify your identity (including, but not limited to, a digital photograph, fingerprint, signature, and the audio/video recording of the test experience captured at the test center); and
- opt-in selections at test registration or after completing the test at the test center. These opt-ins allow you to participate in additional GMAC® programs and services, such as the Graduate Management Admission Search Service® (GMASS®); through the GMASS® service, you may ask us to share certain personal data with schools, scholarship-granting organizations, and certain other GMAC® strategic partners. Such organizations may offer you information and services (see www.mba.com/privacy for more information).

We use the information we collect about GMAT® registrants and test takers for the following purposes, among others:

- Register you for the GMAT® test, reschedule or cancel test appointments, provide additional score reports, and allow you to view past and future test appointments.
- Contact you concerning MBA programs and services offered by GMAC®, such as the GMASS® search service, if you opt in at test registration or upon completion of the exam at the test center.
- Contact you, if you opt in, regarding participation in survey research.
- Verify your identity to maintain the security of the GMAT® exam and other products and services.
- Maintain the integrity and quality of the GMAT® exam and, if you have opted in, other GMAC® products and services.
- Cooperate as required by law or in legal proceedings and as necessary to detect or prevent unlawful activity.

GMAT® Transition

Beginning January 1, 2006, the GMAT® exam will be developed and delivered by two new service providers: ACT, Inc., which will develop the test questions and provide certain scoring services, and Pearson VUE, a business of NCS Pearson, Inc., which will administer the exam and provide Official Score Reports. To prepare for the January launch, the new service providers will have access to the GMAT® registration data, certain mba.com profile information, opt-in preferences, test records, and scores of individuals who took the test prior to 2006.

Choices and Control of Your Personal Information

GMAC® retains personal information only to the extent necessary to: serve your needs; administer the GMAT® test; fulfill our GMAT® test and other GMAC® program responsibilities, including maintaining the integrity of the test and detecting and preventing unlawful activity; and fulfill legal requirements. GMAC® test takers may manage their opt-in selections through their profile on www.mba.com, via GMAC® Customer Service, and may opt in to additional programs and services offered by GMAC®; for a current list of opt-in choices, please refer to the Privacy Policy located at www.mba.com/privacy.

Access, Data Integrity, and Retention

To protect the integrity of the GMAT® test and provide you with access to your GMAT® scores, scores are maintained for 10 years. As a result, certain personal information cannot be altered or destroyed for 10 years. This information includes your test scores, records related to your testing experience (“test records”), and the personal data necessary to verify your identity: for example, your name, gender, country of citizenship, date of birth, and the digital photograph, fingerprint, and signature collected at a test center. A test taker may change his or her name in certain circumstances by calling or faxing GMAC® Customer Service, as described on page 21. Test takers will not have access to the following data and test records: key stroke statistics, exam answers, essays, and similar test records; audio/video tape of the testing experience; or digital photograph, fingerprint, and signature. Test scores are provided as explained under “Releasing Scores and Other Examinee Information” on page 24 and “Score Reports” on page 9.

Security of Your Information

GMAC® utilizes security safeguards incorporated within an enterprise security program. The security program is administered by appropriate GMAC® officials and incorporates administrative, technical, and physical safeguards over your data and our systems to protect your information from loss, unauthorized disclosure, misuse, alteration, or destruction. The security program is designed to incorporate biannual audit and review processes and employee awareness training.

The GMAT® registration information you submit online at our Web site is sent to our authorized service providers (ETS® and/or Pearson VUE and ACT, Inc., depending on when you test) using Secure Socket Layer (SSL) encryption. These service providers are subject to strict confidentiality restrictions.

Data Sharing and Onward Transfer

GMAC® PROGRAM PARTNERS

GMAC® has a number of key program partners, some of which act as service providers to fulfill services for the GMAT® test, related products and services, and survey research. Such partners are subject to strict confidentiality requirements. These partners include:

- GMAT® registration, customer service, test administration at test centers worldwide, and score reporting: ETS® (test takers in 2005), and Pearson VUE (test takers in 2006).
- Test development and certain scoring services: ETS® (test takers in 2005) and ACT (test takers in 2006).
- GMAT® score recipients: Institutions that you have selected to receive your scores will see the scores and certain personal data, including contact and demographic information and, if the institution has elected to receive such information, the digital photograph, fingerprint and/or signature collected at the test center. Please see “Score Reports” on page 9 for additional information.
- GMAC® Programs, scholarship-granting organizations and strategic partners that share our commitment to creating access to graduate business education: These include business schools and other organizations that have agreed to strict terms of use agreements concerning your personal information. They will only see your information if you choose to receive information from them through the GMASS® search service in your profile on www.mba.com, during test registration, or after completing the test at a test center. These organizations are required by GMAC® to provide you with a chance to opt out, in the event you decide you do not want to be contacted by them. If you desire a list of participating organizations, or wish to report problems in opting out, you may contact the GMAC® chief privacy official using the contact information provided on the next page.

- Information technology: IT vendors used to provide IT development assistance.
- Survey research vendors: If you consent to participate in GMAC® survey research, you may receive invitations from research vendor(s) on behalf of GMAC®.

TRANSBORDER DATA FLOWS

GMAC® is a global organization. Those purchasing GMAC® products or participating in GMAC® programs and services, including GMAT® test takers, understand that data is collected, processed, and controlled in the countries in which it is collected and then is transmitted into and out of the United States, which is the primary processing location for GMAC® and its service providers.

LAW ENFORCEMENT AND FRAUD PREVENTION

GMAC® may provide access to personal information as required by law, to comply with requirements or cooperate in a judicial or other governmental proceeding (e.g., a court order, warrant, or subpoena), or in instances where we determine that it is necessary in order to detect or prevent fraud or other unlawful activity.

Children’s Privacy

The exam and other GMAC® programs are not directed toward children, defined in the United States by the Children’s Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA) as individuals under age 13. Children should not submit any personal information to GMAC® and may not take the GMAT® test. If you are between the ages of 13 and 18 and would like to take the exam, please see “Test Takers Under Age 18” on page 6.

Enforcement of this Policy

Because GMAC® is a global organization that collects and processes data within the United States and other countries, we adhere to our Privacy Policy, comply with applicable laws, including the European Union (EU) Data Protection Directive and U.S. state and federal laws, and participate in the TRUSTe® Privacy Seal Program; for more information, view the Privacy Policy on www.mba.com/privacy.

Changes to this Policy

From time to time, we may need to change our Privacy Policy or procedures to accommodate changes in applicable law, our programs or business needs, or for other reasons. If we make any material changes to our Privacy Policy, including changes in our use of personal information, we will post a prominent notice on the www.mba.com homepage and other places we deem appropriate to make you aware of what information we collect, how we use it, and under what circumstances. For our current Privacy Policy, please visit www.mba.com/privacy.

Contact Us

If you have questions about our Privacy Policy or believe we have not adhered to it, please contact the GMAC® chief privacy official by e-mail at privacy@gmac.com* or by calling +1-703-749-0131 or toll-free in the U.S. or Canada at +1-800-811-8042. You may also write to:
